

EXTRA.
RAID NO. 5.Eleven Bookmakers Arrested at North Bergen
To-Day.

RELEASED ON BAIL, AS USUAL.

Improved Racing Card—Signature the First Winner.OFFICIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD.
GREENWICH RACE TRACK, JAN. 30.—The full complement of bookmakers were doing business at Guttenburg this afternoon—twenty-six in all.This ends the strike, as all the bookmakers have returned will pay the $100 a day demanded by the Association.The card, which was the best the Hudson County Jockey Club made up in two weeks, brought out a large crowd to the course.The track was in fair condition. It was too soft, however, for fast time.The first race brought out a very good lot of sprinters, and the talent could not pick the winners. They hesitated between Brewer and Blackwood, and the pair went to the post on even terms.A quiet plunge was made on Signature, his price going down from 15 to 1 to 8 to 1. The latter got the money, but had Blackwood gotten away better he would have won.The customary raid took place just after the first race. Capt. John Graham and a squad of men arrested the track and usual made their way to the office of the Executive Committee.Mr. Graham informed Mr. Carr that he held warrants for the arrest of the bookmakers who did business under the names of the Hudson, Lexington, Jersey Turf, Monitor, Friendship, Eagle, Elizabeth, Westchester, Hart, Brunswick and Union Clubs, eleven in all.The men wanted were notified, and took carriages to Eugene Lehigh's stable, where Justice Lockwood liberated them in $200 bail each, Mr. John C. Carr and ex-Assemblyman Larry Fagan being the bondsmen.They returned to the track and business went on as usual.The second race went to the favorite, Excellencia filly, who opened smart choice and was plucked on for a good thing. Darius opened favorite but his price went back and he was never in the hunt.Longing gelding, a 12 to 1 shot, beat the Nanny Hubbard colt out for the place.Duke John opened favorite for the third place, with Xenophon second and Lady Puister third choice. The latter was plucked on at a terrific rate and was soon sailing even up with Duke John.The latter won in a canter, however, from Lady Pui-ster, who had a hard time beating Xenophon.FIRST RACE.

SHOT BY A CRANK.Julius Somborn Had Refused His Cousin's Demand for Money.Then His Assailant Blew Out His Own Brains.Midday Tragedy in a Broad Street Wine Merchant's Office.Julius Somborn Only Slightly Injured by the Would-Be Assassin.About 1.30 o'clock this afternoon people in the neighborhood of Broad and Beaver streets were startled by the report of a pistol shot.Then came another report and a crowd began to gather in front of 67 Broad street.
It was occupied by L. Somborn & Co., wine importers.A policeman came running up and took a station in front of the door.A number of men tried to force their way inside, but were prevented.All sorts of rumors were rife, but no one appeared to know exactly what had happened.The story that gained greatest credence was that Julius Somborn had been shot dead by a man who had entered his office and shot him.It was a ghastly scene. The crowd had increased so that it was impossible to pass the building without going into the street.In it were many brokers and bankers, who had remained in their offices after noon, the hour of closing the Stock Exchange on Saturday.At 2.05 o'clock a man appeared on the street in front of 67 Broad street, and said: "Somborn has been shot by his cousin and the cousin has shot himself."Just then an ambulance came clanging up and backed against the curb.The crowd parted and the ambulance surgeons entered.It was not until 2.15 o'clock that an Evesing World reporter was admitted to the building and obtained the true story.At 1.30 o'clock Jacob Somborn, a cousin of Julius Somborn, entered the latter's office.
"Give me $25," he demanded.Julius hesitated a moment, and then drew a pistol.Julius tried to retreat, but could not get out of the way in time.Bang went the pistol, and the bullet struck him in the side.He was falling shot, however, and did no great harm.Jacob, without waiting to see the effect of his act, went to the door.Then he turned, and seeing Julius standing, fired a second shot at him.This bullet went into the street door, opened it and standing with his back to the door fired two bullets into his mouth.

He fell dead.

Jacob Somborn was a cousin of Julius. He was fifty-four years old and a war veteran.He had recently been in the habit of demanding money from his cousin.Two weeks ago the latter gave him $25, and two days ago gave him $25 more.When he refused him today he said:
"You have got your pension papers, and you can get money on them."Jacob replied:
"No, I want $25 now."Mr. Julius Somborn, who was but slightly injured by the shot, was taken in a hack to his elegant home, No. 8 East Eighty-third street.

He lives there with his wife and family.

Mr. Somborn was very much excited, but managed to tell his friends that he was all right."One of the bullets hit me in the groin," he said."It must have been a spent ball, for it came out and fell into my shoe."According to the copartnership directory Julius Somborn is the only member of the firm of L. Somborn & Co.Roundsman Edwards of the Old Slip station, said to an Evesing World reporter:
"The first intimation we had of the shooting was when Patrolman McCloskey rushed into the station-house and said that a man had shot himself on 67 Broad street, and was dying."McCloskey was on his way to the station-house at the time of the shooting. As he was walking past 67 Broad street a clerk rushed out of the building with a pistol in his hand and said a man had just shot himself in that place.McCloskey ran into the building and found a man lying in the hallway breathing heavily, with blood flowing from his mouth. Then he came to the station-house.Sergeant Kane ran for an ambulance and directed me to go to the scene of the shooting.
When I went into the office-doors were examining Mr. Somborn. They found that a bullet had struck him on the right side of the station, nearly grazing the flesh."The man in the hallway was dead. I was told that he had entered the office between 1 and 2 o'clock and demanded $25 from Mr.
Julius Somborn. Mr. Somborn refused to give him the money, and the shooting followed. There was a good deal of excitement on the street."Policeman John Fitzgibbon, of the Old Slip station, told this story:
"I was standing on the opposite side of the street at 1.30 o'clock when I heard pistol shots. Just then the window of Somborn's store opened and a man jumped out of it.
"Almost instantly the front door was pushed open and a man standing with his back to the door held a revolver to his mouth and fired twice."
He fell back inside the store, and when I ran across the street I found him to be dying.
"Then I learned that the suicide's name was Jacob Somborn, and that before shooting himself he had fired twice at his cousin Julius Somborn."When an Evesing World reporter entered the store the body of Jacob lay on the floor and to the left of the door. His head rested in a big pool of thick clotted blood.
The suicide was a stockily built man and was poorly dressed. He was of dark complexion, with prominent cheek bones and had a heavy black mustache.
As it definitely, after coroner Shea had completed his examination, Jacob's body was placed on a stretcher, a piece of canvas bagging was thrown over the head and shoulders and the four policemen carried it out through the mortuary crowd to the old slip station-house.Somborn's store is probably 50 feet wide and 75 feet deep. To the right as you enter is the office. It is about 8 feet wide and 20 feet deep. The entrance is at the rear, and it was in that part of the office that Julius Somborn was sitting when Jacob entered and demanded money.According to the story told by Coroner Shea, after Jacob fired the first shot he ran out of the office, manning the door, and then fired through the ground glass window at Julius.
Mr. Manning, of 20 Rutgers street, who happened to be in the neighborhood, attended Julius, who was found sitting in his chair in the office.While the doctor was examining him Julius said:
"I feel something in my shoe."
"Taking off his shoe, he drew out a bullet, a little flattened on one side, and said:
"I'll keep that to remember this by." Then he took back in a faint way with him and died.It was said that the man that jumped out of the window was bookkeeper H. B. Perkins, of 154 West One Hundred and Third street.
A letter addressed "To the Coroner" was found in the suicide's pocket. It stated that the writer was in his right mind, but that he was with a friend and all things seemed to work against him.
He referred to a relative, without naming him, whom he had assisted in years gone by, and who had in his (the writer's) hour of adversity refused him succor.
The letter contained no intimation that an attempt was to be made upon the life of Julius. The letter concluded with a request that the writer's body be incinerated at the Fresh Pond Crematory. "As the cost will be slight," he wrote, "I hope my cousin, Julius Somborn, will be gentleman enough to pay all the expenses."Jacob Somborn resided at 101 Clinton street, this city.

CLEAR AND COLD SUNDAY.

Prophet Dunn Thinks a Warm Wave Is Due About Monday.New York City is like a sort of weather sandwich today. It is raining to the south of us, from Philadelphia to Norfolk, and it is snowing to the north and west of us in Vermont, Northern New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.The prophet in the Weather Bureau says we will probably get "something" before nightfall, and if it rains it will turn to snow.
It will be a little drizzle through the night, clearing in the morning and clearing and clearing during the day.There is a little pink cloud on Dunn's map over Montreal, Quebec, and both of them may get this city by Monday.High northeast winds are blowing all along the Atlantic coast with a velocity of 48 miles at Block Island.New York had a 34-degree temperature at 8 o'clock and 40 degrees at noon. Albany reports 26, and Buffalo 32-degree weather.

WON BY THE SHENANDOAH.

The American Ship Beats the Swan-hilda in the Race from Havre.The big four-masted wooden sailing vessel Shenandoah was sighted off Sandy Hook this afternoon coming into port. She sailed from Havre, France, on Saturday and arrived in company with the Swanhilda, a British ship, on her maiden voyage.Before setting out it had been agreed between the captains of the vessels to make a race of the voyage to this port for a stake of $1,000 a side.The race has been won by the Shenandoah.
The Swanhilda has not yet been reported.
Swanhilda is a clipper ship, built in New York City, and is the largest American sailing vessel afloat. She was built at a Baltic shipyard.

JUDGE KNAPP'S FUNERAL.

The Services at Hackensack Attended by Many Members of the Bar.The funeral of the late Justice Manning M.
Knapp, of the Supreme court of New Jersey, who was suddenly stricken while presiding last Tuesday on the Bench in the circuit court at Jersey City, took place at 1.30 p. m. today at Hackensack, where he was buried.
The services were held at the second funeral home of Hackensack, where many of the late Justice's relatives and friends were present. The body was
